Poker Portraits-HowWould Tom Himself Play Three Eights?-BY WEBSTER. COLLEGES ALTERED

Witnesses, Including State Attorney General, Tell of Bad Reputation.

By the Associated Press. CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 17 -The mine guard or deputy sheriff system employed in the Logan county coal fields today continued the bone of contention between opposing counsel in the trial of Rev. J. E. Wilburn who was indicted by the Logan coun ty grand jury following the miners march last summer, for the killing of John Gore, a deputy.

Judge J. M. Woods has ruled that of the deputy sheriffs among residents in the vicinity of the firing line, between Boone and Logan counties, can be introduced and also their alleged attitude toward the United Mine Workers' members.

Making the most of the ruling, the defense today called E. T. England, attorney general of the state, who was a resident of Logan prior to his appointment, to obtain his opinion on the deputy sheriff system. Mr. England answered that in a general way. the deputy sheriff system. Mr. England answered that in a general way he understood the reputation of the Logan deputies in and about Blair, one of the centers of the march, was "bad" and that their attitude toward the mine workers' union was "not good." On cross-examination the state sought to bring out through the attorney general that the United Mine Workers did not hold the deputies in any especial esteem, prior to the march, according to his understanding, which might account for the hostile sentiment toward each other.

the nostile sentiment toward each other.

Pursuing the same idea, cross-examination of Luther Mosteller, a miner of Blair, appearing for the defense, developed that while the residents of Blair had "no love" for the deputies they did not "hate" them, nor were they "hostile" to them.

Ike Wilburn, a son of the defendant, was another witness called upon to tell of the regard in which Blair residents held the deputies. His testimony was similar to that of other defense witnesses. He claimed, however, that gas bombs had been dropped by men from Logan and that shots had been fired into Blair prior to the fight between the miners and deputies at Blair Gap, where Gore was killed.

J. C. Porter, vice president of sub-was killed.

J. C. Porter, vice president of sub-district 2, district 17, of the miners' union, stated as a witness that he had gone to mining camps along the firing line at the instance of C. Frank Keeney, president of district 17, to call the miners back, and that it was advised through him that they return to the mines.

Brown has not talked since he was brought to the prison.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., June 17.—Every bridge across the Platte river, over which Fred Brown might have escaped to the west, had been heavily guarded for a week. Officials believe that Brown, reaching Medicine Bow yesterday, learned that the Fort Steele bridge, ahead of him, was guarded, and so turned north toward Casper in an effort to find a way through to the west.

When he stopped at Little Medicine Bow station to purchase supplies, men passing his car noticed guns inside. Telephone call was immediately put in for officials here.

Special Agent McClement of the Union Pacific railroad, who had been in charge of the party at the Fort Steele bridge, immediately joined forces with Sheriff Saunders and Deputy Sheriff Cooper in pursuit.

Brown's capture took place in the same rugged country in which "Bill" Carlisle, famous Wyoming outlaw, was captured two years ago.
